The research discusses the types of command and request utterances found in the novel The Fault in Our Stars by John Green and then analyzes them using a pragmatic approach. The background of this research is the students' lack of knowledge about how to talk to teachers and fellow students at school. The data used comes from the novel by John Green's entitled The Fault In Our Stars. The method used in this research is descriptive qualitative method or literature study. The data in this thesis was found using the technique of reading and recording data on speech orders and requests in John Green's novel The Fault In Our Stars and then the data was analyzed according to speech acts. The presentation of the data in this thesis is presented by making a list table for the speech commands and requests. Based on the results of the analysis in this study, 24 datums were found, 20 datums in the form of command utterances and 4 datums in the form of request utterances accompanied by the speech situation and also the presentation of each datum with a pragmatic approach.
